PEACE NOTE IS SENT BY PRESIDENT

WILSON URGES FOR CONFERENCE OF BELLIGERENTS WITHOUT OFFERING MEDIATION.

SEES U. S. IMPERILLED

Secretary Lansing In Statement Today Declared a Continuance of War Might Involve This Nation in Conflict.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Washington, Dec. 21.—Shortly after two o'clock this afternoon President Wilson sent for Secretary Lansing and the head of the state department went to the White House for a conference.

When he left the White House Secretary Lansing said he might have a statement later in the day. Such a statement, it is believed, will explain and amplify his earlier statement and convey an official interpretation of his remarks.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Washington, Dec. 21.—In the formal note to all the belligerents, President Wilson, without proposing peace or offering mediation, has appealed to them to discuss terms which may end the war.

The president's note had been practically forty-eight hours on their way today and officials believe they have reached all the foreign capitals. All official Washington is listening with keenest expectations to any indications on how the notes will be received.

See Possible Chance.

Diplomats think it is incredible that President Wilson should have taken his action without some belief that it would not be flatly rejected without consideration by the central powers. The wish and hope of the Germans that he take some such step has been well known and there is no doubt of the manner of its reception among them.

Officials and diplomats here analyzing the president's note, find something deeper than an appeal for consideration of peace terms. They see that the president in acting was also considering what would have to be the course of the United States to consider its interests as a neutral if the war is to continue.

Complied with the president's recent declaration that the position of neutrals was becoming intolerable, they attach much significance to his statement in the note that his suggestion comes from a neutral whose interests have been most seriously affected by the war, and whose concern for its early conclusion arises out of a manifest desire to determine how best to safeguard those interests if the war is to continue.

Bernstorff Most Hopeful.

"Now I am perfectly convinced that there will be a conference."

Despite the fact that President Wilson's note states specifically and unreservedly that he is "not proposing peace, he is not even offering mediation," they are regarded here as of such a nature as will compel all belligerents to make more of a reply.

British diplomats, on the other hand, no longer expect to be surprised at the president's action. They were not alone, however, for all official Washington had been led by officials to believe that the president in transmitting the German peace proposal without comment had taken all the action that was to be expected from the United States for some time to come.

The development of world affairs. The secret with which the preparation of the note and their dispatch were surrounded was complete, and nothing was known about them until they were well on their way to the belligerent capitals.

The definite proposals of the United States for a league of nations to insure peace and justice throughout the world is interpreted as a step which, if carried through, would mean the abandonment, if the theory of "splendid isolation" which Washington adhered to the country. Significance is attached to the fact that the president uses the word "insure" rather than "enforce," as indicating that he has not committed himself to any one program to accomplish that end, but that he is open to whatever suggestions may seem best to the other nations.

Favors Peace Enforcement.

Repeated efforts have been made to enlist the American government in some sort of international agreement involving responsibility, but it was the answer that the United States would stand alone. Several months ago President Wilson spoke most earnestly before the League to Enforce Peace of his hope that the United States would join some new international arrangement, but not until now is it known to have made the proposal of entering the nations of the world. It is thought that the other nations, Inc., President Wilson's note will find its most ready reception abroad, for all parties have indicated their belief that the war will have been in vain unless from it is gained some guarantee against its repetition.

Former Foreign Minister Sir Edward Gray of England, Premier Briand and for France, and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg for Germany, all have committed the nation to some sort of national reorganization to secure the ends laid down in the president's note and the official offers from the central powers, together with Lloyd-George's speech in reply have accentuated that purpose.

Secretary Lansing authorized to day the following statement:

Reasons for Sending Note.

The reasons for the sending of the note were as follows:

"It isn't our material interests we had in mind when the note was sent, but more and more our own interests are becoming involved by belligerents on both sides, so that the situation is becoming increasingly critical."

"I mean by that that we are drawing nearer the verge of war, ourselves, and therefore, we are entitled to know exactly what each belligerent thinks in order that we may regulate our conduct in the future."

"No nation has been sounded. No consideration of the German overtures or the speech of Lloyd-George was taken into account in the formulation of the document. The only thing the overture did was to delay it a few days. It was not decided to send it until Monday. Of course, the difficulties that faced the president were that it might be construed as a movement toward peace, and in aid of the German overtures. He specifically denotes in the document himself that that was the fact."

U. S. on War's Edge.

"The sending of this note will indicate the possibility of our being forced into the war. The possibility ought to serve as a restraining and sobering force, safeguarding American rights. It may also serve to force an earlier conclusion of the war. Neither the president nor myself regard this note as a peace note. It is merely an effort to get the belligerents to define the end for which they are fighting."

Germany apparently has given up her earlier opposition to disarmament which nearly split the second Hague conference. No official statement has come from either England or France on this subject in the present circumstances.

Interest in Replies.

It was England, however, at The Hague conferences, seconded by France and the United States, that insisted on stating its view in favor of disarmament.

Deepest interest centered today in the probable time and form of belligerent reply.

It is assumed that the members of each group of allies will consult one another and agree on a uniform statement which will be joint, identical or different. The date in each case, is not known.

The solidarity which has been so strikingly shown both by the central powers' proposals and the proposals of the allies practically simultaneous response is expected to be continued here.

It is thought also that some time may elapse before the different groups can settle down to an actual agreement on terms to be presented in case it is decided to heed the president's request by going into them fully.

Meanwhile the allied entente seems to be the central powers' proposal are expected almost any time for transmission to this country to their various destinations.

Receive U. S. Peace Note.

London, Dec. 21.—The suggestion of the United States for an exchange of views among the belligerents, has been received at the foreign office, and is now under consideration, pending which no statement will be made.

Urge Peace in Holland.

The Hague, via London, Dec. 21.—The peace resolution adopted by the Netherlands and approved by the Central Powers has been sent to all the belligerents.

Each government declares that the chief war aim of all the fighting nations is apparently a wish to protect themselves and the rest of the world against future wars; an understanding which would be determined by the central powers' proposal.

The meeting of the council at which the resolution was passed, was attended by many members of parliament, university professors and representatives of peace organizations.

SENATE RESOLUTION COMMENDING WILSON SENT TO COMMITTEE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Washington, Dec. 21.—A resolution strongly endorsing President Wilson's peace note, introduced today in the Senate by Senator Hitchcock, was sent to the foreign relations committee by Senator Borah, on the grounds that the senate had not had sufficient opportunity to consider the note. The text of the resolution said:

"It is the sense of the senate that this action of the president presents the overwhelming public sentiment and desire of the people of the United States."

The senate postoffice committee ordered a favorable report on the bill to bar liquor advertisements from the mails in prohibition states.

SHARP LAWYER HAS LOOPHOLE TO QUASH "BLIND PIG" CASE

Because Warrant Was Signed and Served on Sabbath, He Moves Action to Be Thrown from Court.

Attorney Edward J. Ryan's characteristic resourcefulness of discovering loopholes in court actions sprung again this morning in the city court where the alleged defense of James J. Kelley, North Academy street cafe proprietor, charged with being the keeper of a "blind pig."

This latest resort to technical subtleties was his motion to Judge H. L. Maxfield to quash the action against Kelley because the complaint was signed on Sunday and because the warrant was served on the Sabbath it was issued.

A broad smile covered the face of the court. District Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie gasped with surprise.

After considerable argument as to the legality of the signing of the warrant and its being served on the first day of the week, decision was reached whereby Kelley's counsel and the district attorney will fight the question in the courtroom, Dec. 27.

Judge Maxfield refused to consider the motion previous to this date. Kelley's examination was scheduled for this morning but the unexpected and alleged breach discovered by Mr. Ryan has put this preliminary off to even a later date than Dec. 27.

Lodges invite All Boys and Girls of City to Great Christmas Festival on Saturday.

Janesville children are all invited to a great Christmas celebration and tree to be given in the Eagles' hall next Saturday afternoon from half past two by the combines F. O. E. and A. F. O. E. CHRISTMAS TODAY LITTLE LIKE THAT OF DAYS OF YORE

Old Time English Christmas Has Left
For Us Only a Few of the Quaint Customs.

Although many people insist that Christmas is pretty much the same now that it was two centuries ago, there really has changed. There must be with half the world fighting, and with the other half more or less involved in the outcome, Christmas cannot be the same gay and festive holiday that it was in times of peace. More and more people, not only in the warring countries but here in the United States, realize that Christmas should be a time of cheer, the cheer should be of a serious kind rather than a mere inane merriment.

But do what we will to the tone of the Christmas spirit, the holiday is too old a one, and there is too much tradition connected with its observance to entirely do away with much that originated back in the days of old when there were but few thoughts of abstinence, when Christmas means long revels in the castle's great hall, when the success of a celebration depended upon the degree of jubilant exultation with which the guests extolled each new feature of the entertainment.

With all this more riotous observance of the holiday there was much in the old-time Christmases that we dislike to see disappear; we cannot but hope that no matter what customs drop away the beautiful spirit of warmth and home affections for all downmen that characterized the old-fashioned Christmas will ever be with us.

The old English Christmas lasted for several days, though it was considered bad luck to decorate before Christmas Eve or remove any of the greens before Epiphany. On Christmas Eve the festivities began; a great yule log was dragged into the great hall and piled in the huge fireplace. This was lighted, always with a piece of last year's "clog," treasured throughout the year with superstitious awe. All through the evening everyone made merry playing games, dancing, feasting, and drinking. Then late at night the entire assemblage gathered in the study and listened to tales of Old Father Christmas.

On Christmas morning the boys and girls joined in the singing of Christmas carols. And then dinner! Christmas and feasting were synonymous. The great tables groaned under the "brown and beer men."

The huge hall table's oaken face, Scrubbed till it shone, the day to grace
Bore then upon its massive board No mark to part the square and lord." And then again he says: "Twas Christmas brach'd the mighiest ale; 'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale; A Christmas gambol oft would cheer The poor man's heart through half

Decorating of the homes and the churches was then an even more important part of the Christmas observance than today, when it has degenerated into the mere purchase of ready-made wreaths and bells which can be hung by merely pinning to a curtain. But in the olden days decorating meant the gathering of the holly and bay, and evergreen, and mistletoe. For days before Christmas was crowded out from the castle cutting greens and making "rye merrile" the while, according to a chronicle of the early fifteenth century, "against the feasts of Christmas, every man's house, as also their parish churches, were decked with Holly, Ivy, and Bays, and whatsoever the season of the year afforded to be had." The Conduits and the Standards of the streets were likewise garnished." An old Saxon rhyme runs:

"Whoever against holy do cry
In a rope shall be hung full high.
Alleluia!"
and another:
"Hooll and ivy and box and bay
Put in the church on Christmas day."
Many of the parts that were always connected with the celebration of Christmas in old England are still familiar to us; the Christmas sing, the boar's-head, the Yule log we will, the success of a celebration depended upon the degree of jubilant exultation with which the guests extolled each new feature of the entertainment.

With all this more riotous observance of the holiday there was much in the old-time Christmases that we dislike to see disappear; we cannot but hope that no matter what customs drop away the beautiful spirit of warmth and home affections for all downmen that characterized the old-fashioned Christmas will ever be with us.

The old English Christmas lasted for several days, though it was considered bad luck to decorate before Christmas Eve or remove any of the greens before Epiphany. On Christmas Eve the festivities began; a great yule log was dragged into the great hall and piled in the huge fireplace. This was lighted, always with a piece of last year's "clog," treasured throughout the year with superstitious awe. All through the evening everyone made merry playing games, dancing, feasting, and drinking. Then late at night the entire assemblage gathered in the study and listened to tales of Old Father Christmas.

On Christmas morning the boys and girls joined in the singing of Christmas carols. And then dinner! Christmas and feasting were synonymous. The great tables groaned under the "brown and beer men."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

The useless truck that many people used to buy for Christmas has been a notable phase of human folly. It was a terrible strain on human nature to show the proper spirit of gratitude. When a fellow was given a plush-covered photograph album with tooled leather and heavy gilt edges, for which he had no possible use, of course it was up to him to express the most exuberant joy.

But just as soon as he made up his mind to do so, the album was moved up to the attic, whence in due time it made its way to the junk man. If he ever gave it a second thought, it was to wish that one-fourth of the money it cost could have been put into something that he really wanted.

Among thoughtful people a Christmas gift is not worth making unless the tastes of the recipient are carefully considered. In a great many families and circles of friendship, people frankly inquire of each other what they would like to receive. There may not be quite so much element of surprise about such a present. But the thanks for the same are apt to be much more heartfelt.

MERCHANTS seem to feel that gifts are more practical and substantial than they used to be. The burlap and lace trumpery used to sell the stores is not so present today. In a great many families substantial gifts of needed articles of clothing form the holiday offerings and are most acceptable.

For the children of course toys are the real thing. When you give a boy a handsome overcoat or pair of rubber boots, he looks aggrieved. No matter how much money you put into it, he does not look at clothing as a gift. It is his by right, and he feels cheated out of a present. A toy railroad train that will break down in three days will cause him more joy than the finest garment that the stores can offer. As a result the average home is a mass of broken toys the fortnight after. Probably the best gifts for children are substantial articles for use in athletic sports, which help keep them exercising and interested in outdoor life.

FOOD PRICES.

The idea of reducing prices by means of cold storage warehouses located all over food producing sections has long been advocated. A ware house located at some center for a group of rural communities should seemingly be able to take in farm produce and sell it to retailers at prices to beat the wholesalers who now handle them.

From the middleman's point of view the jobber can take the product off the farmer's hands and sell it cheaper than a local warehouse can dispose of it. He will say that the expense of putting the product through the hands of the several middlemen would be less than the costs a local warehouse would incur in making sales.

Farmers are apt to be jealous of cooperative effort. The majority of them would probably not be satisfied unless their product was handled individually. Yet to get the best results of classification any given product should be handled as a whole. However, cooperative schemes for marketing products are making good progress if farmers can drop this suspicious attitude and accept the impartial grading of a warehouse superintendent; great difficulty can be overcome.

To get a warehouse system going would take faith and patience. It would perhaps not pay anything for a year or two. It would take time to make its product known, money would have to be spent on advertising and personal solicitation. But once its product became known, it surely could undersell the middlemen.

The public is likely to be forced into some such scheme for gathering and storing the products of a given locality and shipping them out as needed. It could be undertaken either by leagues of farmers, associations of consumers, or municipalities or other public organizations. The American people are getting tired of seeing middlemen and speculators pile up their pyramids of profits.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

The little trees on the business streets with their decorations are attracting attention and add to the spirit of Christmas that is to be found at this time of the year. The business houses are rushed early and late and the shoppers come from all parts of the southern portion of the state. The gay windows, the happy crowds that throng the streets and the plans of the associations and societies that will care for the unfortunate ones who would otherwise have no Christmas happiness, all add to the Yuletide spirit. This country has much to be thankful for and apparently the people fully appreciate it and are planning for home gatherings and happy meetings.

A GOOD WORK.

City Attorney Lange has gone about his work fearlessly and with a courage that betokens assurance that he is right. He evidently has no strings tied to him when it comes to prosecuting violators of the city ordinances and it is to be thankful that he was successful in his first case. It is a good work well begun and the Gazette assures Mr. Lange of its hearty support in the great work he has begun of enforcing the ordinances. There are still some unfinished cases on the docket that perhaps he will see fit to clear up in the near future. Meanwhile let him keep on with the good work he has set his hand to, assured of the fact that the public is behind him.

CLEAN THE SIDEWALKS.

The period of the year that is the dread of the average pedestrian is at hand and the snowy and icy sidewalks that are to be found in all parts of the city are ordered cleaned. It is all right for the city officials to order this done, but it is the next thing to see that it is accomplished. The law is plain on the subject and should be enforced to the last letter.

To find real Christmas joy, don't go to the swell houses where the kidlets have a new twenty dollar mechanical toy, but go down into the slums where they have put up a twenty-five cent Christmas tree.

It is pretty hard for a man to feel the spirit of Christmas when he is in receipt of half a dozen Christmas cards from friends for which acknowledgments must be written.

It looks as if the people in Europe who believe that war is a blessing to a nation, were going to get the entire benefits and advantages that flow from the same.

The boys will come home a long distance for Christmas to see the old folks provided there are to be dances where they can meet their girl friends.

After refusing the reporters facilities for getting information, many people proceed to blame the newspapers for not getting things right.

The Russians can't do any fighting at present, as they are too busy planning what they will do with Constantinople after they capture it.

Eggs would taste better still if you could only be assured that the food speculators were out of pocket the full amount of the fall.

By this time the cost of living investigator must be thoroughly provided with automobiles for joy rides about the country.

Collecting campaign debts after election is about like levying a writ of attachment on groceries that have already been eaten.

Owing to the rushing times in all the industries, it is more difficult than formerly for the unemployed to avoid work.

Wall street expects a happy Christmas unless they stop slaughtering each other in Europe.

The Daily Novelette

ALL'S WELL.

A woman's tongue is mightier than a man's fist.—Prof. Simp.

"Really, my dear," he continued with apologetic earnestness, "I don't see how I can get along longer without at least twenty cents a day for luncheon. I get so hungry in the middle of the day, especially since you've only allowed me one egg at breakfast."

"Come out of that, worm!" cried his wife Amazonia. Pulling him out by the nap of the necktie, she boxed him on both ears, in the first place, twerked his nose in her iron fingers to the second place, and pulled out a handful of his already scanty hair in the third place.

"It, my love—" he expostulated feebly.

"Toud!" yelled Amazonia, and she II.

Pittsburg Adams opened his eyes with a start, then his mouth with a smile. It had all been a dream, a fearful dream, and he was still in his cell serving his precious twelve year sentence for stealing a rubber plant and assaulting a lamp-post. He rolled over with a happy sigh.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

Only a Singing Girl.
In a gilded cabaret,
Amid gay Pleasure's whir,
And the ukeleles' play.
She sings "A Perfect Day."
Till the waiters wipe their eyes
(And her hair is hair she buys).

Only a Singing Girl!
Fine ladies, do not eat!
Who wears no borrowed curl,
Let her be first to snarl.
Somewhere there's one holds dear.
The same you're hearing sing!
(That hair and everything.)

Only a Singing Girl!
But her heart beats true, I know,
To her absent darling Earle;
He is but a young old scoundrel.
And a handsome youth, altho
He spends money like a fool.
(She is sending him through school!)

Try it.
Of course there's no way to do a thing that can't be done. Except going ahead and doing it anyway.

Do it Early.
"What can I see in ladies' hose?"
Asked young and timid Sammy.
"Sly... That clever clerk did NOT reply.
"Their limbs, perhaps!"

had been settled by the well, no matter. The Woolworth Building in New York was planned to be the tallest building in the world but after they got it started they discovered the tallest building had already been built. A tall building is very well in its way but it has to be in the city to be of use. Take the elevators out of a tall building and where would it be? Then again take the tall building away from the elevators. Get the idea? No matter how many floors in a tall building there is always one more ceiling. Think it over. That humiliates the floors. But floors are used to humiliation. They are always being stepped on.

Had Cause for Pride.

Traveler—"I say, what are you people so proud about? Last time I came here everybody was very friendly, and new I can hardly get a person to speak!" Uncle Eben—"You'll pardon us, but it's our town pride. You see, Joe Summers picked up a guidebook that fell out of a motor car last week, and we found that the old tannery swamp is a mountain torn, Simmons' stone quarry a precipice, Bill Moodler's beerhouse a wayside chock full of historical antiquities and delusions."

IT DOESN'T REQUIRE A WAR FOR U. S.
WOMEN TO GET CHANCE AT MEN'S JOBS

Bottom: Miss Katherine M. Giles and Miss Mary Bartelme.

Europe had to be thrown into a terrible war before the women there could get an opportunity to try their hands at men's work. And even now they are barred from politics and finance. The American women shown above have sure-enough men's jobs. Miss Rankin was elected to congress last month. Miss Bartelme is judge of the Chicago court for delinquent girls. Miss Davis is commissioner of corrections in New York city. Miss Giles is the "cotton queen" of Wall street, one of New York's successful brokers.

BADGER BOGS YIELD 2000 BUSHELS OF CRANBERRIES.

Wisconsin's 1916 cranberry crop amounted to about 3,000 barrels, and in spite of soaring prices for other food stuffs, the normal price of from $1.50 to $8.00 a barrel still prevails. This fact is even more remarkable when it is remembered that central Wisconsin and the Cape Cod area of Massachusetts furnish the bulk of the nation's cranberry supply. That the past season proved a

JOY IN ONE'S WORK.

Every person should take a pleasure in his work. The idea of joy in one's work has been often ridiculed, but nevertheless it is fast taking root in the minds of many and proving its value and merit. To perform the day's work joyfully and joyously may not be possible, in cases, without effort, but the fact is being realized more and more that it is very much worth while to develop the habit.

NEWS NOTES - MOVIEWLAND by DAISY DEAN

A strong, true girl's fight to save the man she loved from himself is portrayed in "The Ninety and Nine," soon to be released and featuring Willard Courtney and Lucille Lee Stewart.

Just as the one lost sheep was rescued after the "ninety and nine" had been safely brought to the fold; so this drink-sodden youth was saved from the depths and raised to his real place in society through the steadfast love of this girl. His faith in him was repaid by vindication and loyal love after he drove a runaway engine through a blazing forest fire, saving a town from destruction, and proving his manhood.

ART. The quarrel about whether the movies are an art, or aren't, goes on. Meanwhile art is attacking movie directors like measles. But the caterpillars do not escape. The portrait of one camera man in the movies, published this week, shows him looking out from under his eyebrows in a most emotional fashion, while he holds his chin with one hand and holds his elbow with the other hand.

WILLIE'S IN NOW. Willie Howard is to be starred in a series of one-reel comedies before he starts on tour again with the Winter Garden "Show of Wonders." Brother Eugene will be in with him. The comedies will be built around Mr. Willie's impersonation, "The Yiddish Mesenger Boy."

HIS PRESENT. William Russell, star, expresses the firm conviction that young men should not accept presents from women whom they are not engaged to marry.

He accepted one from a girl admirer. It came in a box, and when he lifted the lid a jack-in-the-box popped out and hit him in the eye.

JACK LONDON. The now photographer got a series of pictures of Jack London a few days before his death. They show him driving a farm wagon, holding an armful of young pigs, and in other stunts on his farm in California.

ticularly old-fashioned, indoor sports, and has taken up knitting. She has impersonated a Shakespearean lady with Beethoven Tree in London.

Camille Astor, who was the only white woman other than Helen Ware to appear in the production "The Garden of Allah," has gone to her farm for a few weeks' rest, following her work in that picture. Miss Astor is considering a number of offers which have been made for her services.

Says Cleo Madison of "Mary Pickford": "One of the reasons Miss Pickford has been so successful is the fact that she plays in happy pictures and the audience never leaves the theater after a Pickford picture with a dark brown taste in the mouth."

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I know a young man who seems to be very good to me. He is a good Christian, I think by the way he talks he has no home except what his parents have rooms. He wanted to live with me, but I am a middle-aged lady and I live alone. My pastor said it would make talk. This young man says he doesn't want to marry a young girl because it would cost too much. He works by the day. He would rather have an experienced person. I am a few years older, but I have a home partly paid for. Sometimes he says he is going to settle down for good and then he says he isn't crazy about getting married.

It comes to see me once in awhile. I don't know what is best to do. I like him very much and could get along with him as a husband. Would it be best to take him in if he is sincere? He changes his mind so much. He says he doesn't like to have folks talk about him and me. He tells me to have patience and things will come out all right.

WORRIED.—It looks to me as though the man trying to get as much as he can out of you. He realizes that you have a home and that if he lived with you he wouldn't have to exert himself so much for room and board. I am afraid you would regret it if you married him or took him into your home. Don't make a decision without consulting your pastor.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it right for a girl sixteen years old to go to boy bring him home on Sunday night, once in a while? If he is nice?

(2) When a boy takes a girl home

The Highflyers

Tom Has a Very Strong Suspicion as to the Identity of the Diamond Thief.

"I more than half believe that young Carson took your diamonds. He could easily have pressed the spring while he was assisting you on with your cloak, and then watched for them to drop in the confusion of leaving the theater." Tom looked suddenly out of the window.

"Oh, it is easily made all right in your eyes," sneered Tom.

Marjory dropped her head on her arms and began to sob hysterically. "Oh, you are so cruel, so cruel," she wailed. "You used to care when I was unhappy, and try to comfort me. Now when I am in such trouble, you only make it harder. You act as if you had lost the world old diamonds on purpose." Sobs choked her further utterance. Tom paced up and down in sullen silence. Tears were always more than he could stand, and Marjory had not been much given to weeping.

"Look here," he stopped by her chair. "If I do as you wish and say nothing about the loss to the dealer, he could get us in all kinds of trouble when we did find it out."

"But suppose we did not get the fortune, or even had to wait for it a long time?"

"He cannot ask for anything till the fortune is ours," I took care to make that a condition," interrupted Marjory. I hate the publicity that is likely to come if the loss is found out. Maybe we had better try a quiet hum for them."

Tom sank into a chair and ran his hands through his hair in an agitated manner.

"If I do as you wish in this matter, against my better judgment, mind, you must promise to cut out all this blamed foolishness with those young

"I hope I shall never see any one of them again," was the eager answer. "You know I did not care for any of them."

"Oh, don't do that. Please, Tom," begged Marjory, tears in her voice.

"Well, why not pray?" I certainly shall not leave any stone unturned to find them," answered Tom hurriedly.

"The man would be sure to make trouble if he knew the diamonds could not be had any minute. As it

HEALTH TALKS

FRIGHTFULNESS.

"When I was ten I had St. Vitus' dance for a year. I recovered well before the age of twelve, and was strong and not in the least nervous. I took part in many programs, and never became frightened. But at the age of sixteen I grew very nervous and I could not read or do anything in public. I left school in my second high school year. It was an awful struggle with nightmare and frightfulness all the time. I am now twenty, appear strong physically, but am very nervous. I cannot recite or play piano in public without getting dreadfully scared. My teacher wishes me to sing at a recital soon, but I am fearful. Should I go ahead or not? I am 55 inches tall and weigh 130 pounds."

Fear is an emotion which demands satisfaction by fighting or by running away. Our cave-men progenitors satisfied it in whichever way happened to be expedient. We can't always satisfy it, and we suffer. Some of the greatest deeds are done by soldiers who seem almost paralyzed with fear at the critical moment. Who doesn't suffer the pangs of terror when suddenly called upon to emit a few hastily chosen words in public or when preparing a few thousand well-chosen ones for some formal occasion? Who doesn't feel a little cold in the mouth, gets the diaphragm and wobbles the knees when mounting the platform—about eight miles high to address an audience?

Fear is an instinct. It suddenly pours into the circulation a large quantity of adrenin, a secretion from the adrenal glands. This adrenin makes things go. It starts the machinery in top pitch, in preparation for the struggle. If you succeed in restraining the involuntary impulse to fight, run away, you practically jump off the belt and let the engine run wild for a time. Of course, this feels uncomfortable. The human machine is intended to carry a load. If your fly-wheel runs wild, it is bound to rock you more or less.

St. Vitus' dance doesn't effect "nervous" individuals particularly, nor does it leave a victim "nervous." It is an infectious disease which just happens to have a selective affinity for the spinal cord.

One point in the history of the young woman quoted is worth emphasis. She writes, "I took part in many programs and never became frightened. This at twelve or thirteen. Should a child be 'featured'?"

"Should a little girl be allowed to 'perform'?" If the programs were in any sense public, it others than the family, the class, or intimate friends were there to applaud, the programs were laying the foundation for future "nervousness," in the opinion of the old-fashioned author of these remarks.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Selling Up the Senna.
What kind of senna should be mixed with senna leaves for a laxative—fresh, preserved or dried? Should the jar be sealed? Will the mixture keep without becoming mouldy? (Mrs. P. J.)

Answer.—Any of the kinds you mention. Unnecessary to seal the jar unless the youngsters are too fond of the mixture. The mixture will keep for weeks.

Cutting a Bone Out of the Nose.
One of your articles, "Cutting a Bone out of the Nose," weighed against surgical removal of dislocated bone, have displaced or enlarged turbinate bone in the nose, the septum, caused by two consecutive injuries some years ago, and the doctor advised its removal. Should I submit to operation? (A. F. F.)

Answer.—Yes. This is entirely a surgical condition. In which you mention referred to the hasty removal of the enlarged or enlarged turbinate bone without reasonable local and general hygienic treatment. There is no other remedy for a distorted septum than surgical correction. Turbinate overgrowth, on the other hand, may be successfully treated in many cases, without surgical interference.

Household Hints

HOLIDAY PUDDINGS.

English Plum Pudding.—One pound each currants and raisins, one-half pound suet, four ounces mincemeat (orange and lemon), one pound granulated sugar, one tablespoon grated nutmeg, one tablespoon salt, two basins flour, two good eggs, one pound carrots. First wash and dry the currants, then add to the flour, add salt, nutmeg, sugar, pot. Scrape carrots, wash and grind them, add to flour, etc., then add fruit. Work well together dry with your hands; when well worked, break the two eggs into a basin and beat well up; fill the basin with cold water, then add to the flour, etc. See that it is well mixed. Grease three ordinary basins (trims round preferred), then fill up basins, tie well in cloth so as no water can get to them. Then steam or boil for ten hours. These will keep for months. Keep them well covered with water while boiling.

Suet Pudding.—To one cup chopped suet add one teaspoon mixed spice; mix well, add one cup sweet milk, one cup brown sugar, one cup suet, one cup raisins, one cup sultanas, one cup currants, one cup sultanas, one-half cup nut meats; mix them in dry ingredients and mix. Turn this into well-greased baking powder cans. Fill can two-thirds full and steam two hours.

Steamed Pudding (will serve eight)—One cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon oil, one cup dried fruit or raisins (or one cup canned dried berries with juice saved for dressing); flour with one teaspoon baking powder in it (enough flour to make a stiff batter). Steam two and one-half hours in double boiler. Serve with white sauce made of one cup sugar, chuck butter, two tablespoons flour, one cup hot water, one cup fruit juice (raspberry preferable), one teaspoon lemon or orange juice until smooth. Cut pudding like cake and pour sauce over each dish.

Prune Pudding (to serve six)—Cook half pound prunes till soft, put through a sieve (be sure to have a nice lot of juice), then thicken with cornstarch. Beat whites of two eggs until stiff, fold them into prunes after you take them from fire. Serve with whipped cream; very good served plain.

Carrot Pudding.—One cup brown sugar, one cup suet (chopped), one cup carrots (grated), one cup Irish potatoes (grated), one teaspoon soda in potatoes, one cup seeded raisins, one cup currants, one cup orange, lemon and citron peel ground together, one cup flour, one teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg mixed, one-half teaspoon salt. Mix all together thoroughly. Steam three hours in pail with cover on tight in side of another vessel with water in; or, pour away add more, so the same quantity remains. This is healthier than plum pudding and requires no eggs. Make a sauce and flavor with lemon or vanilla.

Egg BOYCOTT CAKE.

With the cost of everything so high, here is an eggless cake recipe that may help some.

Take three cups flour, two cups brown sugar and one-half cup oleo. Rub all together until it crumbles. Take out one cupful and save for frosting.

Put one teaspoon soda and two tablespoons vinegar into a cup and fill up with water.

Wet the crumbs with this and put in greased pan.

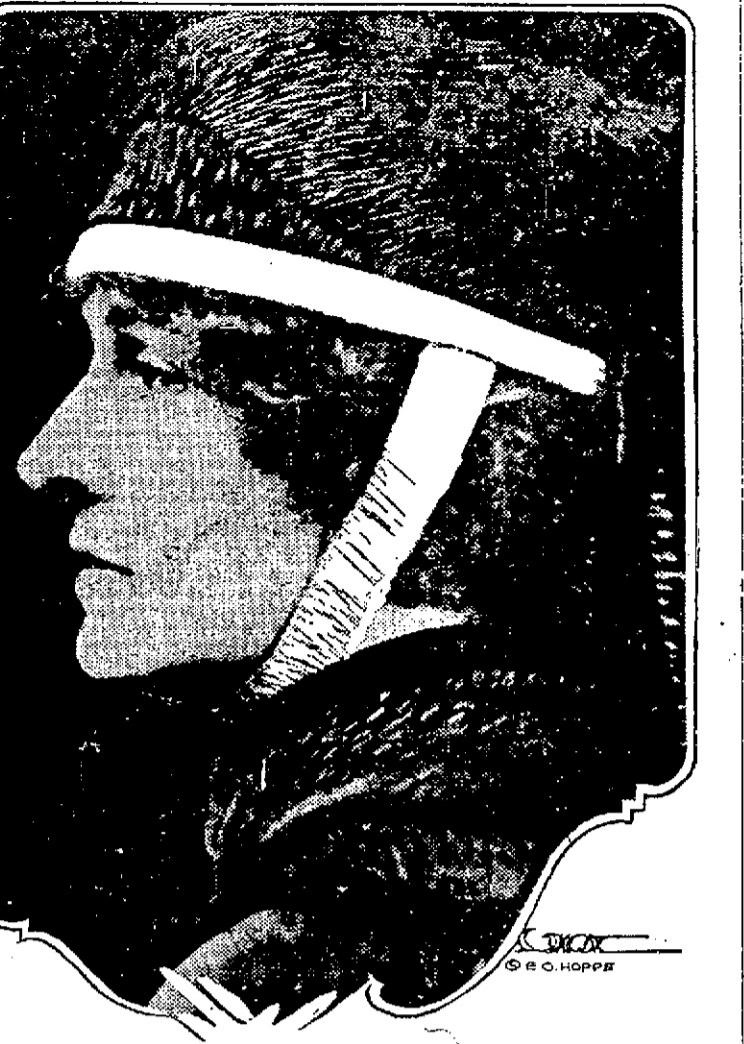

Sprinkle over the top the cup of crumbs you had saved out and bake slow oven.

ECONOMICAL CAKE RECIPE.

Mix together in a saucer one cup of brown sugar, the same amount of raisins, two cupfuls of seedless raisins, one-third cupful of one cupful of cinnamon, a quarter teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of cloves, ground, and a pinch of salt.

Place over the fire and boil for three minutes. Let cool then add one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water. Add one cupful of flour in has been sifted a half-teaspoonful of baking powder. Put in a loaf cake pan or bake one hour in a moderate oven.

AMERICAN BEAUTY TO WED LORD CURZON

SIDE TALKS —By RUTH CAMERON

WHEN I WAS ASHAMED.

Last year, in the week before Christmas, something happened that made a very deep impression on me.

shops came to the house one evening. The man brought me a package which I had sent out C. O. D. He was very cross because he had to wait for me to make out a check, and I rather resented his manner.

"Well," he said, "I guess you wouldn't want to be held up if you had eighty-five more calls to make." Eighty-five calls after Nine Thirty.

He didn't resent his manner after that. I only felt ashamed of myself for having added ever so slightly to his burden. For it was then half-past nine o'clock.

"Surely they don't expect you to go to work at the regular time in the morning if you work that late at night?" he asked.

"Don't they?" he said. "I have to be at the stables at six o'clock."

Just think of it!

Eighty-five calls to make after nine-thirty! And then to be at the stable at six o'clock!

As he hurried out of the door with my check, he added, "And you ought to be the size of some of the bundles. The ladies could put them in their bags easy, but they'd rather have them sent."

And I burned with shame again as I thought of some of the little bundles which I had sent, so that I need not wait.

But We Don't Have to Make It Harder.

That there should be some extra burden on the shop people at Christmas time is inevitable.

That we should make it any heavier than it inevitably has to be is abominable!

The man or woman who does this and then goes about saying, "Merry Christmas," on Christmas morning, is in the class with the Pharisees who lay heavy burdens and grievous ones on men's shoulders, but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers."

'K'

By

Copyright, by McClure Publications, Inc.

K was moved. It was like Max to make such an offer, like him to do it as if he were asking a favor and not conferring one. But the offer left him untempted. He had weighed himself in the balance, and found himself wanting. No tablet on the college wall could change that. And when, late that night, Wilson found him on the balcony and made appeal to argument, the situation remained unchanged. He realized its hopelessness when K. lapsed into whimsical humor.

"I'm not absolutely useless where I am, you know, Max," he said. "I've raised three tomato plants and a family of kittens this summer; helped to plan a trouser, assisted in selecting wallpaper for the room just inside; did you notice it?—and developed a boy pitcher with a ball that twists around the bat like a Colles fracture in a splint!"

Wilson rose and flung his cigarette into the grass.

"I wish I understood you!" he said irritably.

K. rose with him, and all the suppressed feeling of the interview was expressed into his last words.

"I'm not as ungrateful as I think Max," he said. "If you've helped a lot, don't worry about me. I'm as well off as I deserve to be, and better. Good night."

The probationer was distinctly uneasy.

"I—I just wonder," she said, "if you would let some of the girls come in to see you when you're dressed?"

"Why, of course I will."

"It's awfully thrilling isn't it? And—Doctor Wilson going to be an usher?"

Sidney colored. "I believe so."

The probationer had been instructed to find out other things; so she set to work with a fan at Sidney's hair.

"You've known Doctor Wilson a long time, haven't you?"

"Ages."

"He's awfully good-looking, isn't he?"

Sidney considered. She was not ignorant of the methods of the school. If this girl was pumping her—

"I have to think that over," she said, with a glint of mischief in her eyes. "When you know a person terribly well, you hardly know whether he's good-looking or not."

"I suppose," said the probationer, running the long strands of Sidney's hair through her fingers, "that when you are at home you see him often."

Sidney got off the window sill, and, taking the probationer smilingly by the shoulders, faced her toward the door.

"You go back to the girls," she said, "and tell them to come in and see me when I am dressed, and tell them this: I don't know whether I am to walk down the aisle with Doctor Wilson, but I hope I am. I see him very often. I like him very much. I hope he likes me. And I think he's handsome."

She shoved the probationer out into the hall and locked the door behind her.

That message in its entirety reached Carlotta Harrison went on night duty at the same time—her last night service, as it was Sidney's first. She accepted it stoically. She had charge of the three wards on the door just below Sidney, and of the ward into which all emergency cases were taken, it was a difficult service, perhaps the most difficult, in the house. Carlotta merely shrugged her shoulders.

"I've always had things pretty hard here," she commented briefly. "When I go out, I'll either be competent enough to run a whole hospital single-handed, or I'll be carried out feet first."

Sidney was glad to have her so near. She knew her better than she knew the other nurses. Small emergencies were constantly arising and finding her at a loss. Once at least every night Miss Harrison would hear a soft kiss from the back staircase that connected the two floors, and, going out, would see Sidney's flushed face and slightly crooked cap bending over the stair rail.

"I'm dreadfully sorry to bother you," she would say, "but So-and-So won't have a fever bath" or, "I've a woman here who refuses her medicine." Then would follow rapid questions and equally rapid answers. Much as Carlotta disliked and feared the girl overhead, it never occurred to her to refuse her assistance. Perhaps the anxiety who keep the great record will put that to her credit.

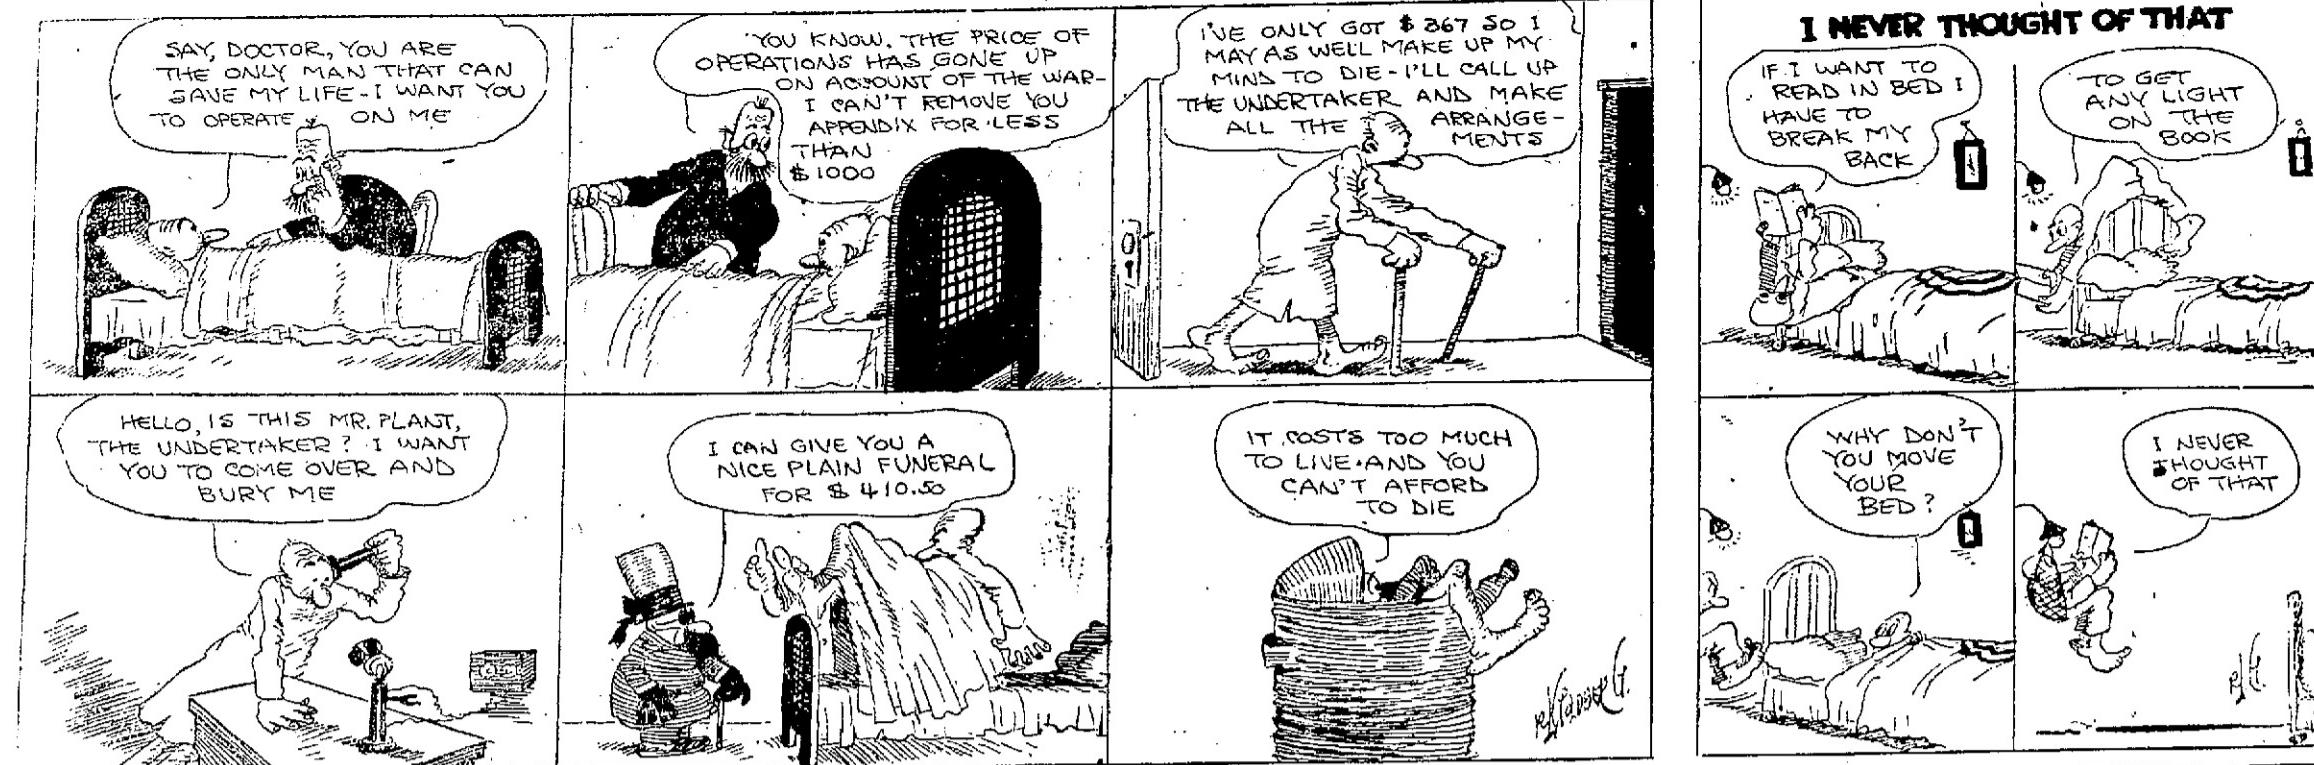

Sidney saw her first death shortly after she went on night duty. It was the most terrible experience of all her life—it seemed to her that she could not stand it. Added to all her other problems of living was this one of dying.

She made mistakes, of course, which the kindly nurses forgot to report—basing left out errors on her records. She rinsed her thermometer in hot water one night, and started an interne by sending him word that Mary McGuire's temperature was 110 degrees. She let a delirious patient escape from the ward another night and go safely down the fire escape before she discovered what had happened. Then she distinguished herself by flying down the iron staircase and bringing the runaway back single-handed.

For Christine's wedding the Street threw off its drab attire and assumed a wedding garment. In the beginning it was incredulous about some of the details. The wedding was to be at five o'clock. This, in itself, defied all traditions of the Street, which was either married in the very early morning at the Catholic church or at eight o'clock in the evening at the Presbyterian. There was something reckless about the five o'clock. The Street felt the dash of it. It had a queer feeling that perhaps such a marriage was not quite

The younger Wilson was to be one of the ushers. When the newspapers came out with the published list and this was discovered, as well as that Sidney was the maid of honor, there was a distinct quiver through the hospital training school. A probationer was authorized to find out particulars. It was the day of the wedding then, and Sidney, who had not been to bed at all, was sitting in a sunny window in the dormitory annex, crying her hair.

The probationer was distinctly uneasy.

"I—I just wonder," she said, "if you would let some of the girls come in to see you when you're dressed?"

"Why, of course I will."

"He's awfully good-looking, isn't he?"

Sidney considered. She was not ignorant of the methods of the school. If this girl was pumping her—

"I have to think that over," she said, with a glint of mischief in her eyes. "When you know a person terribly well, you hardly know whether he's good-looking or not."

"I suppose," said the probationer, running the long strands of Sidney's hair through her fingers, "that when you are at home you see him often."

Sidney got off the window sill, and, taking the probationer smilingly by the shoulders, faced her toward the door.

"You go back to the girls," she said, "and tell them to come in and see me when I am dressed, and tell them this: I don't know whether I am to walk down the aisle with Doctor Wilson, but I hope I am. I see him very often. I like him very much. I hope he likes me. And I think he's handsome."

She shoved the probationer out into the hall and locked the door behind her.

That message in its entirety reached Carlotta Harrison.

Carlotta Harrison went on night duty at the same time—her last night service, as it was Sidney's first. She accepted it stoically. She had charge of the three wards on the door just below Sidney, and of the ward into which all emergency cases were taken, it was a difficult service, perhaps the most difficult, in the house. Carlotta merely shrugged her shoulders.

"I've always had things pretty hard here," she commented briefly. "When I go out, I'll either be competent enough to run a whole hospital single-handed, or I'll be carried out feet first."

Sidney was glad to have her so near. She knew her better than she knew the other nurses. Small emergencies were constantly arising and finding her at a loss. Once at least every night Miss Harrison would hear a soft kiss from the back staircase that connected the two floors, and, going out, would see Sidney's flushed face and slightly crooked cap bending over the stair rail.

"I'm dreadfully sorry to bother you," she would say, "but So-and-So won't have a fever bath" or, "I've a woman here who refuses her medicine." Then would follow rapid questions and equally rapid answers. Much as Carlotta disliked and feared the girl overhead, it never occurred to her to refuse her assistance. Perhaps the anxiety who keep the great record will put that to her credit.

Sidney saw her first death shortly after she went on night duty. It was the most terrible experience of all her life—it seemed to her that she could not stand it. Added to all her other problems of living was this one of dying.

She made mistakes, of course, which the kindly nurses forgot to report—basing left out errors on her records.

She rinsed her thermometer in hot water one night, and started an interne by sending him word that Mary McGuire's temperature was 110 degrees.

She let a delirious patient escape from the ward another night and go safely down the fire escape before she discovered what had happened. Then she distinguished herself by flying down the iron staircase and bringing the runaway back single-handed.

Mexican Pacific Coast Cities Described By Captain Ray Morse

The second letter of Captain Ray D. Morse, formerly of Janesville, returning from Pacific coast cruise into Mexican waters, is published below: (Written from San Jose Del Cabo, Nov. 8, 1916.)

We left Mazatlan Bay Monday about eleven o'clock and came down the coast to a place called Lodos Santos, anchored there and sent a boat ashore to look over the situation. Found the stores well stocked so came up to San Jose.

This is a hard town to describe. Innumerable fields of sugar cane, banana trees in every direction and many coconut trees. Saw some today full of nuts, a queer sight for me. Saw many houses built of bamboo poles with roofs made from palm leaves and little naked children everywhere.

Spent a few days here and all seem to be doing some business. Some stores are run by Chinese. Think of them talking Spanish like a joke. Notice has been posted, taking effect the third of this month, that all food stuffs will be admitted free from the states. This is certainly a blessing to the people, for those things are very high.

We have a custom officer aboard at the time day and night. He is a very fine old gentleman with a blue white uniform, and we all like him. Had a good joke when we went to come aboard at supper time. We took off our shoes so as not to get them wet. I threw mine in the boat and just as I sat down a nice little breaker broke over us and gave us a good wetting.

Now we are outside port, no dock, and we have to land in the surf whenever we go ashore. The water is so warm that we don't mind getting wet, so have lots of fun making landings.

Northern went out with the shotgun a little while this p. m. Got ten mallards and we had duck dinner tonight. The ducks are so tame that it seems a pity to shoot them. We only hunt once a week now, though. This time I was out I got thirteen mallards with eight shells. Gave all but eight of them away and the people were glad to get them.

The poverty of the poor people at Mazatlan Bay is appalling to me, but they do not seem to mind. Sometimes for weeks or even months all they have to eat is fish, clams and tortillas. They do not grow a thing there and the stores sell out so that they cannot buy even a pound of flour.

Last Saturday night they had a dance there and we went over to see the sight. We furnished three lanterns and they said that was the most light there had been in the village in years. There were only six women and such a dance you never saw. An accordion for music, and such speed I never saw equaled. I took the saxaphone over and played a few dances for them. It pleased them very much. As a people they are lot like little children, most of them very good hearted and generous.

Was quite rough sailing around the Horn from northeast wind. Came in Friday on one engine and the sails, as we were in no hurry.

Saturday evening, Nov. 10.

Well we just got back from town.

ANALYZE THOUSANDS OF FOOD SAMPLES DURING LAST YEAR

Had early supper and all went over town, first time we had been ashore in the evening. Nothing to see, as the town is not lighted at all. New man and I went up to the house and the hotel man asked us upon the porch. He played for us a long time on his guitar, and it was certainly some music, the real Spanish article. He seems like a very fine man, is about thirty-five years old and speaks quite good English.

Saturday evening, Nov. 11.

Got away from San Jose del Cabo at four p. m. today. It was a beautiful night, bright moonlight and everybody laying around on deck. Was quite warm today for a while. Expected to arrive at Mazatlan late tomorrow. It is about one hundred and ninety miles across the mouth to the Gulf. Got thirteen ducks in about ten minutes this morning. Haven't heard how election went. Rumor that Hughes was elected but nothing sure yet.

Mazatlan, Nov. 13.

Arrived at ten p. m. last night and came to an inner harbor this morning at seven o'clock. Got through with the customs office and have unloaded cargo. Jimmie and I went up town about ten o'clock and came back about two.

This is a large place, about twenty-two thousand they say. Have not seen enough of the town yet to tell much about it. The weather is fine, not too warm and a nice breeze at this time.

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN TO RAISE TEN MILLION FOR JEWISH RELIEF

more than their duty in extending as large an amount of immediate relief as possible.

Whitewater News

Editorial to the Gazette
New York, Jan. 21.—This week marks the climax of the effort of American Jews to help their brethren in the stricken and starving countries of Europe. Having raised and expended for their relief to date more than $6,000,000, there has just been launched the beginning of a new campaign to raise $10,000,000 more during 1917.

Hundreds of workers have been engaged, tens of thousands of individual contributions have been received, representing money given by the wealthy to the paupers of the poor members of the race. Jacob H. Schiff, Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, ex-Ambassador Henry Morganthau, Public Service Commissioner Oscar S. Straus, Federal Judge Julian Mack, Nathan Straus, Felix W. Warburg, Louis Marshall and Dr. Judah L. Magnes are among the leaders in the movement to raise the large sum now contemplated and inspired by them, men and women who hitherto have played but a small part in the larger Jewish philanthropies brought about the consummation of this largest of all charitable enterprises.

Country-Wide Campaign. New York City has played a relatively minor part in the great plan of relief; it is American Jewry as a whole that has contributed so liberally to the call of their brethren across the seas. Every hamlet and village throughout the country has been enlisted in the cause and committees have been formed in each. Dr. Cyrus Adler, president of Drexel's college, Philadelphia, and affiliated with every national Jewish educational and patriotic movement in America, is chairman of the Philadelphia branch of the American Jewish relief committee as well as a member of the joint distribution committee.

Col. Henry Cutler is chairman of the Providence American Jewish relief committee and a member of the joint distribution committee. United States District Judge Julian W. Mack is chairman of the Chicago branch of the American Jewish relief committee and a member of the joint distribution committee.

Rabbi Moses J. Gries of Cleveland, while president of the Conference of Reform Rabbis of America, attended the meeting at Temple Emanuel on October 25, 1914, and first proposed the idea of a union of American Jews. "We were referring," said Roosevelt of Chicago, "members of the joint distribution committee, has done good work in the west through his large business connections. Peter Wornak, as editor of the Jewish Morning Journal, and member of the joint distribution committee, likewise has rendered invaluable assistance. Another notable figure in the west has been Jacob Wohlfeil, member of the joint distribution committee and chairman of the Business Men's League.

Lohman is Treasurer. The most recent powerful figure to enter the work of the joint distribution committee is Herbert L. Lohman, who a few weeks ago was elected its treasurer.

According to one of the leaders in the movement, the Jews of America do not take to themselves any credit for what has been done or for what they hope to do in the future. They are actuated by two ancient religious teachings: "Oonimluth Chassodim" ("Oonimluth Chassodim") and "Zedaka" ("Righteousness" or "Justice"). With the former present in mind, Dr. Maxnes was anxious to obtain a loan of $10,000,000 for a loan of many millions of dollars without interest, to be expended for rehabilitation purposes at the war's close. The last named admonition has caused American Jews to feel they are doing no

DAWN'S EARLY LIGHT

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

Whitewater, Dec. 21.—A terrible accident happened at the Pester farm about three miles north of this city between seven and eight o'clock this evening. Edward Lentz, ten years old, was born in the barn and had been working to start the separator. The engine stalled and started so he took a cob and dipped it in the gasoline can, lit it and held it under the engine. The gasoline can stood nearby and the result was a terrific explosion. The clothing of the man and his three children became afire. Mr. Lentz was burned so badly about the face that his eyes were swollen shut and his lips were so swollen that he could not speak. His son, Lawrence, was burned almost as badly as his sisters. Laura, aged twelve died at one o'clock this morning from her injuries. The little girl Marble is in a critical condition this morning. The building was of masonry and did not burn. Drs. Dunn and Miller were summoned and all that was possible was done for those struck.

Miss Esther Leishman seriously took a finger of the right hand by getting it caught in the typewriter at the Register office yesterday.

Miss Francis Zulli is expected home today from Waupeton, Minn., for the holiday vacation.

Mrs. Lesser Baskett of Plevna, Mont., is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Bleuer, a few days. She came to attend the funeral of her father, Swen Leigier at Stoughton Monday.

EAST MILTON

East Milton, Dec. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Dickhoff and son spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jennings.

Mrs. Henry Johnson and daughter spent a few days at Milton with her parents.

William Gallup of South Dakota is visiting at the home of his aunt, Mrs. George Jennings.

Roy Fromader of Janesville and Oscar Johnson of Beloit spent Sunday at Nick Prell's.

West Not Now.

It will never do to talk about the "now" West. Dr. Charles D. Walcott says that near Helena, Mont., are found the oldest animal remains now known and also the oldest authentic vegetable remains. Some years ago he discovered the remains of crabs, animals, suggesting in form fresh water crabs found the world over.

FORMER JANESEVILLE MAN DESCRIBES HUNT

Frank H. Snyder Writes Father of Hunting Trip Made Into Mountains of Manitoba.

J. S. Snyder of 419 North Washington street recently received a letter from his son Frank H. Snyder who was formerly in the insurance business in this city and who now owns a ranch in the south of Ste. Rose Lac in the province of Manitoba, Canada, in which he describes in detail a big game hunt in the mountains near his present home.

"There were five of us in the party," writes Mr. Snyder. "We loaded a wagon with a double box with hay and grain for the team and each one had a box of provisions and our bedding and tent. We had a big load. In the past we always have gone northeast of here about thirty miles but people from near said there was nothing there, as it was not late enough and not enough snow and cold weather so we decided to go to the mountains which is twenty-six miles to where we stopped where big game was plentiful. We left here at 11 o'clock on November 20th and never stopped until we got there at just dark, twelve miles south of Ochre river.

"It was the only one that had ever been there, so acted as guide after we struck the foothills as there are several trails one may take. I told the boys that near where we would pitch our tent there is a big saw mill, known as Elder's mill, and that we would put our horses in the mill barn for the night as it was getting late.

When we got there, there was a lot in the house so I ran in and asked for a night's lodging, which was granted as the owner had just got there the day before. You bet we were glad to sleep in a good house rather than sleep in a tent.

"As we got higher and higher up we found more snow. Four to six inches were laid on day after day and I went over the highest ridge and there was ten inches of snow, which made it rather hard walking, especially going up so we kept in elk trails which are like cow paths through the woods.

"Well, we soon found the same was hard to get on account of so much underbrush such as haze and cranberry bushes. Now the whole mountain covered everywhere with very large white poplars and spruce and birch. The weather was so nice, that is, no wind that every forenoon and afternoon we would be from thirty-eight to fifty yards of the game and would not know it until they ran and then we could not see them always. Other times when we had seen them we could not hear any horns and we are only allowed to shoot bulls. There is a $50.00 fine if caught with cow or calf.

"We had hunted three days and no one had got any in our party although there was considerable shooting every day. The fourth day I told the boys we had to have some fresh meat so tonight I would bring in an elk. I was assisted all the time with Mr. Elder and his brother-in-law, who knew the mountains well. They live in Southern Manitoba. So about ten o'clock that day there was a lone shot fired about 500 yards from us. At once I ran about twenty yards to an elk path and squatted down on one knee to see under the bush if they should come our way. At once he saw them coming right toward me but could not see them well enough to pick the one with horns until they were right upon me, but I sat there. I thought if they went by me in that path they would have to jump over me and I would get one before that. When they got within about seventy-five yards of us my partner fired and hit the calf which increased their speed down the path with me sitting on it until they got

"It's two hours," he told her. "Here goes the first."

"They'll see that clear over to the fort," Sue whispered.

As the rocket soared into the night sky, Tom lay on his back, trussed like a Thanksgiving turkey, beaten and bruised, gagged and bleeding, outside the ranch house door. Inside Juan and his men were drinking, singing and howling derisive yells at the cursed Americans, and they planned the death of Tom Madigan at dawn.

Once a shadow stole out and stood beside him. A little slipped toe touched his cheek, and Clarita laughed at him.

"You have happy bridal homecoming, yes, señor! Where your wife, huh? You going to celebrate your Fourth fine, yes?"

"That's all," the boy said when the last rocket went up. "We'd better hustle now like he said."

Halfway the boy slowed down and listened.

"Hear 'em coming"—he grinned—"the soldiers."

They waited till the detachment rode up, eager, serious-faced youngsters in khaki most of them, with Tod Mason at their head. Tod, who had been in every good scrimmage and chase since the campaign opened; Lieutenant Tod, as the rank and file called him proudly.

"We'll get him all right, Mrs. Madigan," he promised. "Don't you worry. You can ride on to that hill and wait for daylight. When you see the flag down on the ranch house, you can come back."

Tom thought he was dreaming when he felt someone behind him, crawling by inches until his bonds were cut, and a revolver thrust in his aching hand. Then came the attack, the surprise of Juan and his men, Clarita's high-pitched cries above it all, and at last, as daylight broke over the valley, the sudden quiet that follows victory.

"Fifteen prisoners and two Mexican casualties," reported the lieutenant. "Haul down the flag, boys."

And when Sue rode up she found Tom mounted on a stump, leading "The Star Spangled Banner."

"Boys," called Tom, "my wife, God bless her! Just tune up that chorus again before you ride on. It sounds mighty good to me. I don't believe in war, but I'm with you on this."

about forty-five feet from me. I couldn't see anything but a dark object coming when they turned right for me. You bet I picked my head quick then. I fired when he was thirty feet from me and he fell dead twenty feet to one side of me. The cow and calf stopped and turned back on the bound. I could easily have shot the other two as they did not want to leave the one I shot until they saw me.

"We have to dress in white coat and cap while hunting. I saw lots of bear tracks but could not find the bear. The day before I left there a fellow found a den and shot three in an old one and two cubs. A mile from our camp. After staying there a week I was the only one that had shot anything so the fellows went home and went north of here. I have not heard what luck they had."

Appreciated the Apple.

A curious testimony to the importance formerly attached to the apple may be found in the coronation service of our Anglo-Saxon kings. The coronation benediction runs: "May the Almighty bless thee with the blessing of grapes and apples . . . by his blessing may this land be filled with apples, with the fruit and dew of heaven, from the top of the ancient mountains, from the apples of the eternal hills . . . —London Chronicle.

WILL COLLECT FARM ACCOUNTING BOOKS

Rock County Farm Improvement Association to Study Farm Management In This County.

Almost a year ago the Rock County Farmers' Association association dispatched among a number of farmers of the county farm accounting books, in which could be kept accurate accounts of all crops and all expenditures. This association is now planning on collecting these books to make a thorough study of them in an effort to determine just what are the most profitable crops to be raised in the county. The farmers who have been using the books during the year have selected from all parts of the county and are men who conduct general farms and who specialize in one or more particular products. From a comparative study of yields and expenditures as shown in the farm accounts, not only will be developed a number of practical economies that can be practiced by all farmers, but it is expected that a long step forward in farm management will be made from the analysis of the statistics gathered in this way.

During this past year thirty-seven farmers have kept the books given out by the association, but according to officials of the association this is only a starter for many more accounts will be kept during 1917. The books are to be collected next week, and at the same time the campaign for the next year will be pushed. Those farmers who have books living near Janesville are asked to bring them to Klemmer's office in that city on January 3 and 4; similar receiving points will be maintained in Beloit at the Y. M. C. A. on January 3 and 2; in Janesville at the Y. M. C. A. on December 27 and 28; in Milton Junction at the high school on the afternoon of December 29; in Milton at the high school on the morning of December 26; in Edgerton at the high school on December 22; and in Orfordville at the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank on December 28.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, Dec. 21.—Captain Rollie Williams presented A. J. Dexter and Edison Lamoreaux, coaches of the football team for the past year, with gold rings. These were gifts from the members of the football squad to the coaches as a token of esteem in which the coaches are held by the players, and in appreciation of the able work done by the coaches. The presentation was made during the opening exercises at the high school Wednesday morning. Captain Williams gave all credit for the wonderful achievements of the team to the coaches and the backing given the team by the citizens of Edgerton. He was roundly cheered as he left the platform, as the students knew that their captain was undoubtedly the best high school football player in the state this year.

Short speeches were also made by Rollie Kellogg, Mahlon Ogden, Norman Clark, Clarence McIntosh, Rush Tonton and Eddie Short, who have played their last football game for the Edgerton high school. James Curran, next year's captain, also gave short talk. The football team and coaches were banqueted as guests of W. P. Guenther at the Carlton hotel Thursday evening.

Mr. Ogden had at this time been a member for twenty-five years, was presented with a gold watch from the company. The watch was engraved, giving the dates of his service. That the Edgerton fire department is efficient has been manifested several times within the past year when they were called upon to combat with several of the fires that have hit the city. When Chief Klein of Janesville was called to the city with some of his men last winter to help fight the fire that consumed the Polar estate, he paid our chief, Mr. Ogden, a compliment on the manner in which the company had performed their work. It is deeply regretted by the members of the company that Mr. Ogden should resign and we sincerely hope he will have a difficult problem to fill his position as well as Mr. Ogden has done.

NINETEEN HOGS DIE IN FIRE IN CENTER

William Howell Suffers Loss When Ashes Start a Blaze in His Hog Pen.

William Howell, a town of Center farmer, residing two and a half miles northwest of Footville, lost nineteen hogs, weighing approximately 200 pounds each, in a fire which destroyed his hog pen early this morning. It is presumed that the practice of throwing ashes into the hog house was responsible for the blaze. Ashes had been thrown into the pens last Saturday, probably containing coals which smoldered during the night and finally set the frame building on fire. The fact that the wind was in the north prevented other farm buildings from being fired, since it blew the flames in the opposite direction. The loss is a total one, as there was no insurance on the building or the swine.

When you think of insurance think of C. P. Beers. Adv.

MANY WILL ATTEND MADISON HOG SHOW

Local Hog Raisers to Send Large Delegation to Big Swine Week to Be Held in Madison in February.

Many farmers and raisers of hogs in the country are planning on attending the Wisconsin Swine Week, to be held in Madison, February 5-10, and a number of the farmers' associations in this section are at this time planning delegations and arousing interest among the farmers to insure a large delegation from this county. The exhibition will doubtless be the most successful one of its kind ever held in this state, in that the finest stock obtainable will be shown, and the latest wrinkles in hog raising will be demonstrated.

Many of the things tried out at the experiment station at the university will be demonstrated, and it is the intention of the exhibitors to show the hog raisers of the state the value of some of these new methods.

A number of eminent speakers have been secured to take part in the program. Among these is G. B. Van Norman whose pre-eminence in handling problems of hog raising is recognized throughout the country. Of him James E. Poole of the Breeders' Gazette and Live Stock World said: "There is not a man in the country who is better qualified to speak about the good and bad points of hogs than Mr. Van Norman. For nine years he ran a meat market in your state and at the same time shipped stock to the Chicago and Milwaukee markets. For the past forty-two years he has been on these markets as a commission man. He is as enthusiastic over the hog as any possible."

each year he raises between one hundred and two hundred hogs. His operations will be of interest to every hogman who attends what I understand will be an exceedingly important conference."

The local delegation will be headed by E. L. Parker and L. A. Markham, who as a member of the state committee of the Wisconsin Live Stock Breeders' association has been pushing the campaign strong in this country.

"GREEN" SEED POTATOES REQUIRE LOW TEMPERATURE

Owing to early fall frosts in some sections of the potato belt of Wisconsin a rather large amount of "green" stock was harvested. According to authorities this condition of potatoes does not necessarily prevent their being used for seeding purposes, provided the seeders are of the right kind, which are elastic and bend easily, instead of being firm to the touch, and which also tend to peel readily, low temperatures are advisable, ranging from 35 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

"On the whole the potato seed produced in the leading centers, where standard varieties are being raised, satisfy for a year, and out of the seed available for planting, the best is the 'Golden' in the state, which is a medium-sized tuber, weighing about 100 pounds per bushel, and is a good variety for the market. It is a good keeper, and is not easily damaged by freezing, and is good for seed purposes."

At the Mercy Hospital: Reverend F. H. Brigham of the Carroll Memorial Methodist church, is at Mercy hospital suffering from a complication of intestinal troubles. He is reported as resting easier this afternoon.

FORMER JANESEVILLE MAN DIES SUDDENLY

Frank Coulter of South Dakota succumbs to Heart Failure While Visiting Here.

Frank Coulter of Ipswich, South Dakota, died yesterday from an attack of heart failure at the Planters' hotel at two o'clock this morning. Mr. Coulter had been in exceptionally good health lately, but was taken violently ill during the evening while calling on friends.

Mr. Coulter was born in the town of Portage and spent his early life on a farm in that locality, later on moving to this city and conducted a meat market on North Main street for several years. He then took up farming again in Emerald Grove. About fourteen years ago he moved to Ipswich, South Dakota, and spent his time in the lumber business. He is survived by his wife and four children: Harry and Willis Coulter of South Dakota, Mrs. Roy Barlass of North Dakota, and Mrs. Briggs of South Dakota. He is buried in the cemetery in Janesville today and will take the body to Ipswich for interment. It is probable that short funeral services will be held from seven until nine Friday evening at the Whaley undertaking rooms on North Jackson street.

SHECKARD TO COACH CUBS' OUTFIELDERS

BASKETBALL GAME VICTORY FOR CLERKS

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Jim Sheckard, once the star of a star Cub outfielder, is returning to his old team. Sheckard will not play in the outfield as he did in his heyday, but he has been selected by Fred Mitchell as the man to coach and instruct the young Cub outfielders. He will have about the same job with the Cubs as Mitchell formerly had with the Browns.

Sheckard in his young days, when at his best, stride, was one of the greatest outfielders the game has ever seen. He joined the Cubs in the spring of 1906 and with his speedy play and skillful hitting was one of the chief reasons why the Cubs won the pennant in 1906, 1907, and 1908. His last season with the Cubs was 1912, when he left them to play the following season with St. Louis and the year after that he managed the Cleveland team in the American association. At the close of the 1914 season he left the game and since that time has been occupied with his business at Columbia, Pa.

Fred Mitchell, the new Cub coach, expressed the opinion that proper inspection in regard to the finer points of the game is all that's required to make C. Williams, the young Cub outfielder, one of the brightest stars of the game, and he said somewhat the same thing of Max Flack and Leslie Mann. Scheckard says Mitchell, is one of the smartest men the outfield has ever known, "and is just the one to insure the young Cubs and greatly improve their playing. There are plenty who agree cordially with Mitchell."

Both Scheckard and Mitchell plan to be on hand early in the spring to start the Cubs off on what promises to be one of the best seasons they have had for some time. Cub fans are now extremely hopeful and happy over the team's prospects. It is probable that Scheckard will be used at different times through the season as chief scout and to pass final judgment on young minor leaguers who look like good big league material.

Badger losers, still traveling in the Nine conference championship form, defeated Lawrence, 41-14. Methodists, who had been extremely hopeful for the game and each had his man marked. They hung loose and it was only by exerted efforts that the Badgers were able to pull away.

Lancaster put up a tough game all the way through, but the superior weight and playing gave Wisconsin opportunity to keep its preliminary slate clean. Tom McCarthy, the Badger, was beaten especially for the game and each had his man marked. They hung loose and it was only by exerted efforts that the Badgers were able to pull away.

LAJOIE PUTS BENDER AMONG TOP PITCHERS

National league players say that no pitcher in that organization has ever approached Charisty Mathewson in the art of pitching. According to veterans and youngsters who have faced Matty, he was a past master in all his finer points in the art of twirling. His almost uncanny control of the ball enabled him to take advantage of every trick of the trade. No greater hats have never stopped to the plate than Larry Lajoie. Strangely enough during his entire career Larry never batted against Matty. Recently when asked who was the wisest pitcher he ever faced, Larry replied: "They tell me Mathewson was a very wise pitcher, but if he had anything on other Bender I am glad I have never had to bat against him before." Bender when asked a prime was a world of stuff, but even after he lost a great deal of it he was still a wonderful pitcher, because he knew every trick of the profession. Once he discovered a batter's weakness, that batter was lucky to hit him safely with a shovel. His control was usually perfect, and under fire he was at his best. Pitchers like Bender are rare birds in baseball."

MORRIS MILLER

Another one of Dave Fullz's "misunderstandings" has been nailed. He cited the case of Pitcher Ray Keating of the Yankees as one where a player might be made to suffer suspension without pay when unable to give service because of injury. President Ruppert of the Yankees does the nailing. He says Keating pitched nine games in the spring shooting nothing and was turned over to the physician for inspection. The physician reported on the case—Keating was no good for the rest of the season. But Keating was paid his full salary of $5,000 just the same. Mr. Keating got about $100 a inning for all the "work" he did for the Yankees last season. Call for the next case, Mr. Fullz.

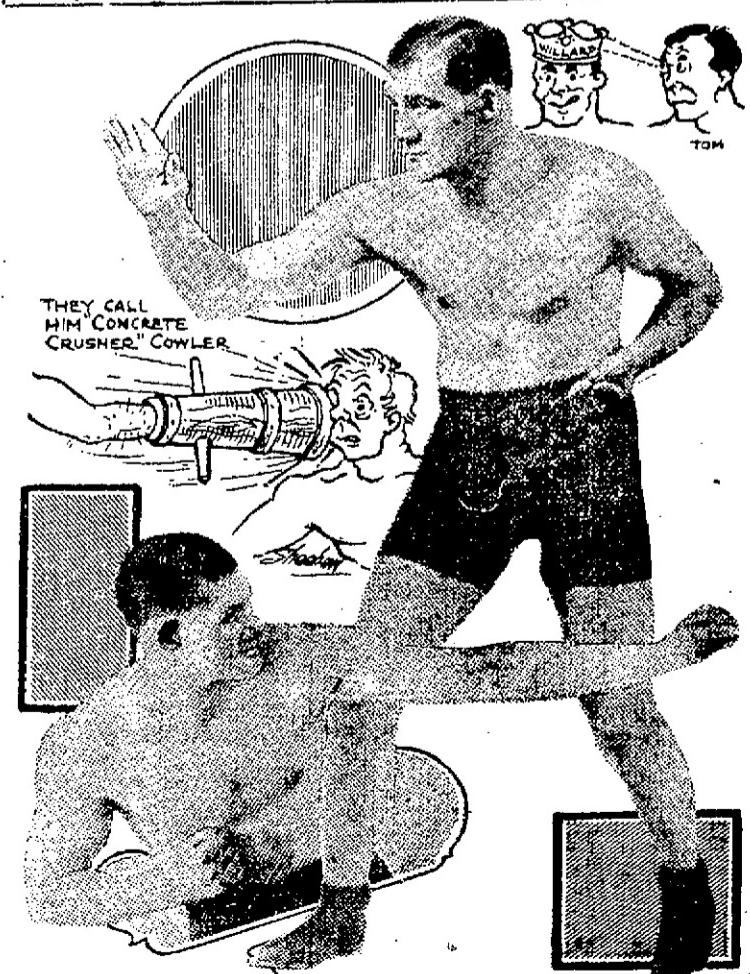

George Stallings, manager of the Boston Braves, was in Chicago recently buying live stock. No, he didn't make any deals for ball players. Stallings attended the livestock show and bought some prize cattle to add to his herds on his plantation in Georgia. A man can always realize on cattle, while ball players are an uncertain investment. However, while in Chicago, Stallings talked enough baseball to hand Jim Tinker an awful rap. He said what the public needed to put them in the run for popularity was a manager for their team. And then to rub it in, Stallings said he would hate to risk his reputation as a manager trying to lead the bunch of junk that Charley Weegham has left on the Chicago team.

TOM COWLER IS ONE OF FEW BIG BOYS WORTHY OF CHANCE AT HEAVY CROWN

Tom Cowler.

Tom Cowler, sometimes known as "Concrete Crusher Cowler," one of the best of the few leading heavyweights, believes that he is sure to grab the heavyweights' crown when he gets his first chance in a title bout. Cowler has beaten Gunboat Smith, Battling Levinsky, Porky Flynn, knocked out Tom McCrory and has beaten big Bill Brennan twice. He is very fast and clever for a big boy and his followers claim he is the greatest all-round fighter his class has seen since the days of the famous Charlie Mitchell.

horses in mid-season, so to peak, in the Northern League. At a recent meeting of the league in Minneapolis, President John Burmeister tendered his resignation, but the league directors refused to accept it, pending reorganization of the league. The plan now proposed for the Northern is an eight-club circuit, to be extended into the former Western Canadian league territory which has been unoccupied for two seasons. Brandon and Moose Jaw are said to be ready for a return to baseball, and in case Duluth and Superior do not retain their franchises, as rumored, Minot, in North Dakota, and Aberdeen, in South Dakota, are available, both these cities having filed applications for representation.

Judging from reports, Pittsburgh probably to place in the field this season a group of girl swimmers for competition. Miss Lillian Acton is credited with covering fifty yards in 31 seconds. Miss Hazel Fowler is said to be doing close to 1 minute 10 seconds for 200 yards and 6 minutes 50 seconds for the quarter mile. L. Wilson is plodding along 60 feet. Miss Henrietta Cook has swum 100 yards in 1 minute 25 seconds, and Miss Edith Beck is rated good for 100 yards with the breast in the astonishing time of 1 minute 16 seconds. If these girls can show similar performances in the title tests they will be extremely hard to beat in all but the sprinting races.

LANGUAGES? PROFESSORS GIVE SEVEN REASONS

FOR THE GAZETTE

Madison, Wis., Dec. 21.—Why foreign language study is valuable in high schools and colleges is set forth in seven reasons in a bulletin now being published for the use of Wisconsin school principals, teachers, and boards, by a committee of professors and others of the University of Wisconsin, who were appointed to report on the study of foreign languages in the high schools and universities.

The seven reasons are as follows:

"1. The mental discipline supplied by foreign language study is strict and varied. The teacher is able to assign perfectly definite lessons, and the pupil knows exactly what he is to do and how he is to do it. It necessitates close, constant and orderly thinking. It calls for the highest degree of concentration. It exercises the mind and moral concepts in their own languages is indispensable.

"2. As an aid in mastering the English tongue, it involves an acquisition of a grammatical mastery such as a student of English alone generally possesses. Since English is a highly developed tongue, nearly two-thirds of its vocabulary is of Latin and Romance origin, and it is intimately related with the Teutonic tongues, the student learns to make a more exact and discriminating use of English.

"3. Full understanding of English literature can only be obtained through a knowledge of foreign languages because of the inter-relations of literature of various countries. To depend upon translations is like depending upon another person's estimate of a fellow human being, rather than upon first-hand knowledge.

"4. For the understanding of the evolution and history of civilization, one of the chief uses of education, a knowledge of foreign languages is the only key. To understand the American people today, an ability to study the views of the various nations which have been closely related with America's history, and their mental and moral concepts in their own languages is indispensable.

"5. For the cultivation of the scientific habits of mind and for the pursuit of professional studies, foreign language study is indispensable. The results of foreign scholarship are immediately and fully accessible only to those who can read the European languages. The pursuit of advanced scholarship—professional, literary, or scientific—is impossible without a reading knowledge of at least two foreign languages.

"6. In business, a knowledge of foreign languages is becoming more and more indispensable, as business relations with other countries become more extensive. American firms are constantly handicapped because of inexperience of employees capable of using other language than English.

"7. As an aid to citizenship, foreign language study is most valuable. The United States never had a greater need of understanding the language of European countries. The peace and progress of the world depend upon cosmopolitanism which is firmly established on a solid foundation of real understanding and sympathy between nations. In no way can this be more effectively created than by the study of foreign languages."
